

tf.timestamp Stay organized with collections Save and categorize content based on your preferences.

https://www.tensorflow.org/api_docs/python/tf/timestamp

Provides the time since epoch in seconds.

Function Signatures

```
tf.timestamp( name=None ) -> Annotated[Any, _atypes.Float64]
```

Code Examples

```
tf.timestamp(
    name=None
) -> Annotated[Any, _atypes.Float64]
```

```
tf.timestamp(
    name=None
) -> Annotated[Any, _atypes.Float64]
```

Documentation

Provides the time since epoch in seconds.

View aliases

Compat aliases for migration

See

Migration guide for more details.

`tf.compat.v1.timestamp`

Used in the notebooks

- Random noise generation in TFF

Returns the timestamp as a float64 for seconds since the Unix epoch.

Common usages include:

- Logging
 - Providing a random number seed
 - Debugging graph execution
 - Generating timing information, mainly through comparison of timestamps

Returns